Dear Frostwood Families:

Food allergies are on the rise! We have many Frostwood students with food allergies. While Frostwood is not a nut free school, we would like to inform you that your student may be in a class with a student who has severe food allergies.

We want to make you aware and to share our steps to ensure student safety. Although not all food allergies are life threatening, we ask your support by doing the following:

- Refrain from sending snacks that contain peanuts and tree nuts. (Although our student allergies are not limited to nuts, they are the most prevalent.)
- Read the labels of your child's snack. (Some foods are manufactured in factories that also process nut products.)
- Contact the homeroom teacher in regard to birthday treats.

Frostwood teachers and staff have been trained to implement food allergy safety precautions. Frostwood procedures promote allergy awareness and ongoing safety for our students. While we actively monitor all food given to students and prohibit sharing of food among students, your support by providing safe snacks and reminding your student not to share is appreciated.

We hope you will reinforce this procedure at home, as well, to keep students safe and secure from harm.

Please feel free to call Nancy Musgrove or me if you have any questions. 713.251.5700
